

St John's Church, Carisbrooke - Burial Plan

St John's Church was originally in the Parish of Carisbrooke; it is located geographically within Newport and is therefore often referred to as St John's Church, Newport.

The plan was probably created at the time that the grave memorials were cleared (except for Frances Eldridge's, 1907 which remains). The plan shows just the surname and date(s) of death – presumably taken from the inscriptions.

The list of forenames has been generated from the Isle of Wight Family History Society (IWFHS) transcriptions from the Burial Index cards held at the County Record Office, Monumental Inscriptions database and the actual Church Burial Register.

Some alternative dates/names have been added following the information transcribed from the plan where there is a connection between the individuals in double graves (i.e. same address or man & wife etc) and/or where the different dates/names could have been misinterpreted when reading a worn inscription or misreading from the plan.

Some interments have not been identified – this is either where there is more than one possible interment in the year or where there is no interment recorded in the year.

The 'Plan Section' column reflects the churchyard sections as defined by the IWFHS.

The 'Grave No' is a meaningless number to identify individual graves, each interment into a double grave has the same number.
